Having made several unsuccessful efforts to land a monster rockfish, Reynolds went to the vicinity of the "parlor" Monday morning before sunrise. It was his idea that he would be one of only a few anglers on the river so early in the morning.

There was not a Jonah in the party.' commented Capt. Chappelear, the boatman. "Everybody caught fish, although we don't call toadfish fish down here. Mr. Hurley had his fun with them."

A second trip on the river, made after dinner, was interrupted by the appearance of black clouds in the west, actompanied by lightning and thunder, and the anglers hurried ashore. They had five dozen big hardheads to their credit, however, and were perfectly satisfied.

Edward Beuchert and Benjamin Harding, might in another car and members of the same party Charlie Simons had Dick Peed, George Richards and W. E. Dulin.

It was just about daybreak when the two automobiles left 9th and K streets and started east in the direction of the resort on the Patuxent river. Two hours later the nine anglers were arranging their lines preparatory to starting the day's sport.

"Now the two automobile owners are afraid they will wear out their cars between this city and Benedict," commented a member of the party.

A short string of perch and a number of big eels made the catch interesting.

Threatening and falling weather caused severe disappointment to hundreds of anglers who had made extensive preparations for fishing trips Decoration day. Many of them braved the weather conditions, however, and tried their luck at different places between Harpers Ferry and Piney Point. The season for catching bass and crappie in the District opened Monday, May 29, and a number of persons were at the tidal basin bright and early in the morning. Weather and water conditions were fine during the day, but late in the afternoon rain drove the sportsmen home.

"It was the first time that several members of the party had fished for hardheads, it is stated, and they were delighted with the sport. The trouble-some toadfish gave them a few calls and they also caught a supply of perchand they also caught as supply of perchand they also caught a supply of perchand they also caught as they weighed 235 pounds."

BALTIMORE, June 3.-Baltimore has the marketing habit. There is no city in America that puts a big basket on its arm more regularly or more enthusiastically, to go forth and purchase ts food in the public square. Few cities, if any, on the other hand, have such markets to visit. Baltimore's markets are an institution—an institution picturesque and venerable and of a size and solidity that commands espectful attention. Lexington Market, for instance, is three squares long. with 1,200 stalls, and 50,000 people visit on many Saturdays.

with 1,200 stalls, and 50,000 people visit it on many Saturdays.

The markets are one of the sights of the town, like St. Peter's in Rome or the White House in Washington. The visitor is taken forth to see them as he is taken to see the falls at Niagara. The streets for blocks around take on a market-day atmosphere. Temporary stalls are set up on either side, until there is only a narrow lane left in the middle of the highway, where the big cars nose their way a foot at a time. Countrymen and farmers draw up their wagonloads of produce along the curb and wait philosophically for purchasers, scorning the practice of the recent immigrant, who is wont to cry his wares. Candy stands and flower stands and peanut stands appeal to the esthetic and the gastronomic functions of the olfactory nerve. The street faker is in his glory. Perched on a coffee box he extols the merits of "a miraculous invention, ladies and gentlemen—a combination of the South American sapopa tree, the East Indian senega root and the Mexican ammonia plant—a combination shaving soap, shoe polish and complexion beautifier.

The market itself is housed under a long, high roof, like the roof of a railroad terminal, subdivided into hundreds of little stalls. Everything which the human race is in the habit of chewing and swallowing finds its place somewhere. Beef and mutton, pork and veal and sausage and bacon, a string of fruits that would read like the invoice of a South American freighter, all the vegetables you have ever seen and a few new ones, fish, string of fruits that would read like the invoice of a South American freighter, all the vegetables you have ever seen and a few new ones, fish, nuts, bread and pastry, live poultry, candy—consult the supply lists of Herr Tortolowitz von Batocki, the new German food dictator, for a partial list of what you can buy.

"What are you going to do with that can of worms?" was the inquiry made of the youngster by an angler who saw him with a supply of such bait.

"Catch fish," was his quick reply, "or sell them for a dime."

This was about 1842, but soon afterward he was about 1842, but soon afterward he was about 1842, but soon afterward he was turned out of doors because of disturbing raps which appeared in his aunt's home. Then such men as William Cullen Bryant, Justice Edmonds of the United States Supreme Court and Prof. Wells of Harvard took the young man up and vouched for him. At the home of Ward Cheney, near Hartford, Conn., when he was nineteen, Home is said to have been first "levitated" into the air by some unknown force. He grew to be tall and red-haired, with a freckled face, slate-gray, red-rimmed eyes, sharp teeth, a snub nose and cold, bony fingers. His body was described as like an iron cross on which some one had hung a coat. Indeed, he was rather uncanny to look upon. In 1855, when twenty-two, he went to England, where he began giving seances, where there were mysterious rappings, table tiltings, ghostly appearances and feats of levitation.

retailing practice is firmly established is a question. The case of Baltimore is not typical, for obvious reasons. In the old Maryland city the public market is a feature solidly intrenched in the regard of the citizen, and furnishing the visitor with a unique and interpretable.

citizens decided to start a market, and conducted a lottery as a means of raising the necessary cash. Lotteries were a highly respectable institution in those days. The private ledger of George Washington occasionally charges the price of a few lottery tickets to profit and loss.

In announcing production figures today the geological survey predicted the output this year in the Lake Superior district alone, which last year produced about 85 per cent of the country's total, possibly would be 60,000,000 tons, and that there probably would be an increase in price of 70 to 75 cents a ton for this ore.

An increase of 14,000,000 tons, or 40 per cent, was shown in last year's output compared with 1914, while the value of ore shipped increased 41 per cent. Minnesota, with 33,464,660 tons, led in production, with Michigan second, producing 12,514,516 tons. Alabama was third, with 5,309,354 tons. Virginia, with a tonnage of 349,042 shows a decrease of 8 per cent over the figures for 1914, while Maryland experienced a still greater retrogression with a decline of 14 per cent, to 5,500 tons. year, the greatest output of any year thing impressive about the old station

The signs of the west are legion. Th Analogy is merely a method of con-rincing without proof.

The signs of the west are legion. The very currency changes. A paper dollar is a curiosity: the silver "cartwheel," which the east never uses, becomes a feature of the scenery and a burden in the pocket. The penny is conspicous by its absence. Here, too, you first meet the Mexican section hand, who covers the face of the southwest, and the cowboy hat reaches the eastern limit of its range. There are subtler signs than these of a new land. The breeziness, the frankness, the approachability of the people all speak of the great open spaces. A man's shoes may get tight from taking water, but he doesn't. A successful blacksmith can either

The milk of human kindness would be much richer if it wasn't skimmed so often.

If the donkey were king of the brute creation more men might truthfully boast of royal blood. One writer says that Satan's fall was probably due to his having accidentally slipped on a peal of thunder.

The average man does just as many queer things when he isn't in love as when he is, but they are not quite so conspicuous.
